

Media Release

For immediate release
Thursday 10 September 2009

Animal group calls on Enfield councillors to go cruelty-free at their next meeting

The BUAV, the UK's leading organisation campaigning to end animal experiments, is urging Enfield Councillors to support a motion at its meeting on the 23 September which, if passed, will make Enfield the UK's first council to adopt a policy to only use cruelty-free cleaning products in its offices.

The BUAV is delighted that Councillor Christopher Cole, who has introduced this motion, supports our Clean up Cruelty campaign which seeks to end cruel animal testing for household products and their ingredients.

The motion, which calls on the council to use only BUAV Approved products, will now go before the full council meeting on 23 September. If council vote to support this, Enfield will be the first council in the UK whose cleaning contractors can only use BUAV approved products The BUAV's Humane Cosmetics Standard (HCS) and Household Products Standard (HHPS) is recognisable by the Leaping Bunny logo, an internationally recognised and patented cruelty-free certification.

The BUAV's Clean up Cruelty campaign received success in Parliament recently when all major parties pledged to put a ban on animal testing for household products in their manifestoes for the next election.

81% of the public said they would support a ban¹ on the testing of household products on animals, though many ingredients in UK household products have been, and can continue to be, tested on animals.

BUAV's Chief Executive, Michelle Thew said: "The BUAV is delighted that this important issue will now go before the full Council. We urge those residents in Enfield, who are concerned about the cruelty and suffering inflicted on animals to test cleaning products, to contact their local councillor urging them to support this motion."

ENDS

¹ CIAO research 2006

For more information please contact Erin Seymour, marketing and communications officer, 020 7619 6978 or email erin.seymour@buav.org; alternatively, phone 07951 6511 72 or email christopher.cole271@btinternet.com.

For a list of BUAV approved products please visit www.gocrueltyfree.org.

Notes

- 1) In 1997 the Government decided to stop granting licences for cosmetics tests on animals, because the suffering caused was not justified given the trivial nature of the products tested. There is, however, no such prohibition for household products, despite clear public support and very similar arguments.
- 2) The BUAV (British Union for the Abolition of Vivisection) has been campaigning for over 100 years to achieve a world where nobody wants or believes we need to experiment on animals. We are committed to achieving our aims through reliable and reasoned evidence-based debate.
- 3) The BUAV's Humane Cosmetics and Household Products Standard is recognisable by the Leaping Bunny logo, an internationally recognised and patented cruelty-free certification. Approved companies must open up their supply chain to a robust but straightforward audit. The process ensures that neither the product nor, crucially, any of its ingredients have been tested on animals at any stage of the manufacturing cycle since a fixed cut off date. For more information on the auditing process and a list of approved companies visit www.gocrueltyfree.org.